The GLOCKPORT allery

The Illinois State Museum Lockport Gallery is a forum for visual arts created by past and contemporary artists and craftspeople. The Gallery highlights the state's fine, decorative, industrial, and ethnographic arts through its active programming:

- Changing exhibitions of paintings, drawings, weavings, photographs, and sculptures
- Educational and interpretive activities including lectures, tours, workshops, films, and other related programs
- Publications including exhibition catalogues, brochures, and teacher resource guides
- Research on the art and artists of Illinois

The Lockport Gallery is a special place that allows visitors to explore, contemplate, and learn. As a branch site, it continues the tradition of the nationally accredited Illinois State Museum located in Springfield. Other branch sites include Dickson Mounds Museum in Lewistown and the State of Illinois Art Gallery in Chicago.
